Amanda Villalobos focuses her practice on litigation defense and product liability.

Her work has been concentrated in the area of civil litigation, defending high profile corporate clients in general liability matters, including pharmaceutical and medical device matters, consumer class actions, and cases involving personal injury and wrongful death. She formerly practiced in the area of intellectual property where her practice focused on patent litigation.

Amanda graduated in 2005 from UCLA, with a major in microbiology, immunology & molecular genetics. She received her J.D. from The University of San Diego School of Law in 2008, where she was a judicial extern for the Honorable William Q. Hayes, United States District Court for the Southern District of California. Additionally, Amanda was a member of the USD Appellate Moot Court Board National Team, a quarter-finalist for the 2007 Paul A. McLennon Sr. Honors Moot Court Competitions, and a Teaching Assistant in property law.
